Guidelines & Exchange List
Guidelines

- Drink one (1) gallon of water per day.
- Start your day with 1 cup of warm lemon water.
  - ½ squeezed fresh lemon in 1 cup of warm water.
- Drink only 1 cup of organic coffee per day.
- Drink as much herbal tea as you want throughout the day to curb cravings, hunger, and flush out toxins.
- The meal plan shows an example of a 10-day meal plan using a handful of groceries. Mix and match any of the recipes as you would like. The key is to make your life simple, so if you want the same breakfast, for example, every day then go for it. Or if you want different recipes and meals on different days that works. Stay within portions, mix and match, and you are well on your way to sexy abs and body.
- Some recipes have more than one (1) serving (noted in the recipe), for you to save for extras or freeze for later.
- Here are the abbreviations within the recipes, just in case you're not familiar with them: C. = cup, TBSP. = tablespoon, TSP. = teaspoon, LB = pounds, OZ. = ounces, DZ. = dozen

Exchange Lists

Eating Out Guide
You should be able to go out to eat and still enjoy living in a lean, healthy body. There are some tips and tricks you can incorporate for those nights out on the town. Don't be afraid to ask kindly for things to be prepared with olive oil or coconut oil and to keep creams, dressings, and sauces to the side. If you are nice, then you shouldn't encounter any problems with the servers.

A go to tip is to ask the servers not to bring out the chips or bread before the meal. If it's not at the table, the temptation is not there.

* Most portions are way too big at restaurants. You can ask the server to box up half of the food and bring you the other half. This will help you stay within in portion control and then you get to have leftovers later. It's a win-win

* Do not order dessert. Most restaurants do not carry desserts that are made with healthy sugars and fats. If you are still hungry after eating, ask for some seasonal fruit.

* Explore new restaurants. If you live in a big city, you can find amazing vegan and raw restaurants. Try new things.

In general, when eating out, you want to think of eating:

* 3-5 OZ. lean protein choice (grilled or baked)
* ½ C. carbs (rice, potato, sweet potato, quinoa, or gluten free bread are all fine)
* ½ C - 1 C. veggies (steamed, fresh without sauce are your best choices)

Avoid:

Deep fat fried, creamy sauces, canola/vegetable oils, sugars, bread made of wheat and white flours, sodas and soft drinks (lemonade).
Mexican:

Mexican Salad bowls, stuffed peppers, and even a burrito is fine to order. Ask them to leave out any creams or sour cream. If ordering a burrito, eat half, and save the other half for 2 - 3 hours later or your next meal.

Chinese:

Stir fry is always a great choice with your protein of choice. Ask them to sauté the veggies in olive oil.

American:

Order a hamburger, but see if the bun can be gluten free, or remove the bun. Instead of ordering fries, ask for a side of veggies (steamed veggies can be very good). Chicken or shrimp Salad (ask for dressings on the side), top with a little balsamic and olive oil and fresh lemon.

Thai or Indian:

This is usually very healthy. The key is stay within portions, so be mindful of the equation mentioned above. And eat a small portion (if you must) of the naan bread.
